14th anniversary Mass

Our physical life is wrapped around the pursuit of comfort, wealth, pleasure and acceptance, distracting us from pursuing a long-lasting relationship with God, through prayer, kindness, humility, taking ownership of our mistakes and doing something to correct it. Taking up our cross is a call to do away with all that the body and mind seeks or desires and embracing the struggles and sufferings with Christ.

Thoughts on the Readings for the 20th September 2026

Undoubtedly, a major theme running through the whole of the Old and New Testaments is that of 'justice'. God is wholly just and we are called, both individually and corporately, to lives of justice also. The question, of course, is what do we mean by justice? What does the Scripture mean by justice? What is the justice of God? Some of the answers to these questions can be found in today's Gospel passage. Reading this passage may call for some adjustment in our normal ways of thinking. And this is just what the First Reading from Isaiah prepares us for: For my thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways my ways, says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts.

Growing in Christ means a constant shifting of our conventional ways of thinking and sometimes the adjustments do not come easily. To have the mind of Christ means, like him, to 'empty' ourselves. In our case, to empty ourselves of many of the convictions we take for granted. Today's Gospel is the parable of the workers in the vineyard, or rather, the hiring of workers for a vineyard. The parable is linked with the passage immediately preceding. It is important to note that the divisions of our Scriptures into chapters and verses were not done by the original writers. Sometimes these divisions are quite arbitrary and create unnatural breaks in the text. Because today's passage begins a new chapter, we are inclined to overlook its relationship to what has gone just before in the previous chapter. To better understand context, it's always useful when reading a Gospel passage to look both behind and ahead of the listed verses.
