The Deep End: Not Again Peter!

by Jane Mellett

Poor Peter. He never seems to get it quite right. His journey throughout the Gospel is definitely one of ups and downs as one minute he is a ROCK, the next a failure. Peter wants the journey of discipleship to be a happy, rosy place where all is well because God is in his life. Unfortunately it is not that simple as having our minds set on 'divine things' means that we must be agents of change in this world where 'human things' are concerned. Peter is being moulded into the rock that he needs to be although at times he appears as a small stone.

To be an agent of change usually means being counter-cultural and that brings many challenges and 'crosses'. That is Jesus' message to his followers – if you are interested in my Kingdom, then that will involve hardship along the way. Why? Because the Kingdom that Jesus proclaims is one where everyone is included, where justice and peace reign and communities are built on the principles of solidarity, mutuality, respect and love. And not just any love, but AGAPE love, i.e. love of people we may not even like. Why is this so hard?

Jesus' love changes things. It is a radical love, one with no boundaries, to achieve a world where this Kingdom is a reality will most definitely involve going against the grain and therein lie the crosses. Jesus is trying to explain to Peter the path that lies ahead.

As the children and young people prepare to return to school, we wish them well. We also spare a thought for their parents and teachers to whom we entrust their welfare. May God bless them all and keep them safe during this school year.

POINTS TO PONDER - Peter has just been congratulated as the rock on which Jesus will build his church. He is comfortable in a theology of grace and glory. Suddenly that rock looks sandy and unsafe. Jesus calls him abruptly out of his comfort zone into the real world where suffering must be faced (cross is used here as a proverbial term for suffering and agony, not referring specifically to Jesus' crucifixion). One of the ideas in the gospel is that we take up the cross of doing what is right and being willing to bear it. Like parents who try to explain, cajole, encourage and define what is right for their children, even when they are thought foolish. Jesus bore a cross to the end of his convictions and love. Taking the cross is also accepting and living with pain, suffering of any sort, and the griefs of life we can do nothing about. Crosses may be inflicted on us by others. We know of people who have accepted a heavy burden in life and who ploughed tough furrows, through no fault of their own. They have been helped often by the example of the one who carried the cross to the end. Help often came to them also from family, friends and neighbours. On the way to Calvary, Jesus was helped by one man, remembered forever, Simon from Africa. Help can come from expected or unexpected quarters, but help there must be if we are to bear our crosses in life. In prayer we might ask how we help those near us carry the burdens of their lives.
