The Deep End - A real royal wedding
by Jane Mellett
Today's Gospel is difficult. Stories of judgement, weeping and gnashing of teeth just don't appeal much to most people. Failure to turn up to a dinner party was of course bad manners. To refuse an invite to a royal wedding was even more serious. To kill the servants or messengers who came to you with the invite…well this is pushing things a bit far. As with all parables, there is more to this than meets the eye. God wants to be in a relationship with each of us. We are all invited to his banquet. We exclude ourselves from being in fellowship with him, from his hospitality, when we give God the brush-off. We sometimes do our best to put ourselves outside of his presence. So what host would not be offended? And what about that poor chap who did come but was not suitably dressed? If we accept the invitation we should be ready for change and not just change of an outer garment. The issue for Matthew is the replacement of the unworthy in the community with those who have responded to Jesus' demands for his Kingdom. And as usual, they are not the people you would expect!

POINTS TO PONDER
Complexity and perplexity
Critics of Pope Francis have consistently maintained that Pope Francis generated confusion in the Church, whether that be at the individual level – or at the global level – the Synod and the wider synodal process.
I don't disagree that there is confusion, but I don't think Pope Francis can be blamed for it. Confusion is an unavoidable consequence of a time when unity is needed but uniformity is no longer possible.
Pope Francis did not invent this plurality; he made it impossible to ignore. The Church is no longer able, if indeed it ever was, to sustain communion by assuming cultural uniformity of a single European grammar for articulating the Gospel. It is a universal Church of diverse peoples with languages and histories, rites and cultures, joys and wounds all of their own.
This is precisely the ecclesiological horizon affirmed by the Synod's Final Document, which insists that 'the harmony created by the Spirit is not uniformity' and that 'the unity of the Church is not uniformity, but an organic blending of legitimate diversities.
The Final Document also describes the Catholic Church as a 'Church of Churches' and sees synodal renewal as fostering 'an appreciation of local contexts as the place where the universal call from God manifests and fulfils itself. Taking legitimate diversity seriously may mean introducing a measure of complexity and even perplexity into the Church.
Eamon Conway.
