MISSION SUNDAY The second collection today is taken up at all Masses across many countries to support parishes and dioceses that struggle to make ends meet. Your contribution will help parishes in places as far away as Africa, Asia and South America. It will help pay for catechism teachers, parish schools, diocesan nursing homes, the education of student priests and religious sisters, and many other worthwhile projects. Your contribution is an act of solidarity with our brothers and sisters throughout the Church.

Gospel for the 29th week of the year...

The Pharisees went away to work out between them how to trap Jesus in what he said. And they sent their disciples to him, together with the Herodians, to say, 'Master, we know that you are an honest man and teach the way of God in an honest way, and that you are not afraid of anyone, because a man's rank means nothing to you. Tell us your opinion, then. Is it permissible to pay taxes to Caesar or not? Matthew 22:15

Honesty as Sobriety
You are as sick as your sickest secret!

That's a popular aphorism in recovery circles and it speaks a deep truth. If we have to hide something then we aren't well, at least if the blemishes we are hiding are moral rather than physical. A recovering alcoholic once told me: "Sobriety is only 10% about alcohol or a drug; it's 90% about honesty. You can drink, if you can do it honestly." Indeed you can do anything, if you can do it honestly.
That's an interesting moral principle: You can do anything if you don't have to lie about it.
There are exceptions to this of course if people have hardened their spirits or are otherwise so morally insensitive that they are not ashamed to openly admit or even flaunt duplicity. But the principle is sufficient as a moral guide for basically anyone walking in grace. Simply put, you can do anything as long as you can be honest about it.
But that covers a lot of ground. Could you cheat someone, be sexually unfaithful, slander someone, or commit a sin of any kind and feel comfortable in sharing that openly with those who are closest to you? The need to hide some action from others is a strong moral nudging. If we are walking (at least essentially) in grace we don't need any other commandment: We can do anything as long as we don't have to lie about it.

And there is another insight in this. When we do something wrong and then cover it up and lie, it is not so much the particular thing that we did wrong that harms us, it's the lying about it afterwards that does the real damage. We are all weak, we all fall, we all commit sin. God understands this and it is not so much the sin itself that harms us. What causes the real harm is lying, covering up, sneaking around, not being transparent, living a double life. Why? Because the human spirit is not made to live in dishonesty and duplicity. When we do wrong, we either have to stop doing what we are doing or, at least in honesty and contrition own our weakness, or our spirits will automatically begin to harden and to warp. Such is the anatomy of the soul; it cannot tolerate moral duplicity for long without hardening and warping.
Indeed, that is how the unforgivable sin against the Holy Spirit, the one infamous sin that cannot be forgiven, can happen. It begins with lying, rationalization, cover-up, and dishonesty. When we sustain a lie for any length of time, we begin to warp our own insides and the sin can become unforgivable not because God doesn't want to forgive but because we no longer see any need to be forgiven. Lying, especially to ourselves, hardens and corrupts the spirit. That's why Satan is called the prince of lies rather than the prince of weakness. That's also what is contained in Martin Luther's famous axiom: Sin bravely! The invitation, in Luther, is not that we should have the courage to sin without flinching, but that, if we do sin, we should have the courage of honesty so as not to lie or rationalize about it after the fact.
One of the qualities that endeared Henri Nouwen to the world was precisely his honesty about his own weaknesses and his refusal to pretend he was anything other than what he was: a sincere, weak man struggling to live his life in honesty. For example, there were seasons in his life when he wouldn't go on the road alone to give talks and conferences. Partly his reason for this had to do with his sense of community and his desire to bring a core member from his community along with him. Part of his reason though was humbler yet. He was also honest enough not to always fully trust himself to travel alone. The presence of family and community around us can be a powerful moral watchdog on our behaviour. Nouwen was humble and honest enough to admit that sometimes he needed this in his life. Too often we lack that kind of humility and honesty and consequently have things to hide, little or big secrets which we keep hidden and which keep us from full moral health.
When he was falsely accused of sexual abuse, Cardinal Joseph Bernardin was able to stand before the world and say, with credibility: "Everyone who knows me also knows that this accusation is false because my life is an open book." Everyone who knew him believed him precisely because of the transparency evident in his life, the radical sobriety manifest in his person.
Sobriety is ultimately not about alcohol or some drug. It's about honesty and transparency. And, like honesty and transparency, it is not all or nothing, but has degrees. We are all sober according to more or less, according to the degree that our lives are an open book with nothing hidden in the closet.

Family Masses Our usual family Masses are beginning this coming Saturday 24th October in Barna at 6.30p.m. and on Sunday 25th October ins na Forbacha ag 10 ar maidin. The hope with these Masses is that all family members will attend and celebrate our primary Christian liturgy with the community…

Seeing your Life through the Lens of the Gospel Matthew 22-15-21

1. The story sees a mixture of religion and politics, a potentially explosive combination. Jesus does not ask us to avoid politics, but that our involvement in the affairs of the world be informed by the perspective of the reign of God. How does the gospel give you a vision of how your involvement in society should be?
2. Pharisees and Herodians were not natural allies but a shared dislike of Jesus brought them together in an attempt to discredit him. Perhaps you experience the same opposition in society today when you profess to being a Catholic. Jesus did not get into an argument with them but simply professed his belief in the priority of God in his life. What have you found helpful in bearing witness to the fact that you are still a Catholic?
3. Jesus recognises that we can be faced with conflicting claims for attention. He does not tell us how to solve that dilemma, but challenges us to make sure that our allegiance to God takes priority. When have you been faced with a conflict of loyalties? What helped you to get your priorities right? John Byrne osa

Many thanks to the members of the Pastoral Council team who attended the in-service day in the Meadow Court for the Pastoral Councils of Clonfert and Galway. Over two hundred from the different Pastoral Councils attended. The day was very successful. There were a number of presentations on the day, including one from the Galway East Faith Community.
It is my intention, in the near future, to have a joint meeting of all the Pastoral Councils of Castlegar, Mervue, Ballybane, Renmore and the Good Shepherd.
It will give us an opportunity to hear in detail the content of the presentations and continue to build on the work of the Pastoral Councils. Fr. Martin.

Aifreann: Next Irish Mass in Coolough Church on Thursday, October 22nd, at 7.30 pm.

Sunday 18th October 2026
Mission Sunday
(29th Sunday in Ordinary time)

In today's Gospel Jesus and the religious leaders in Jerusalem continue their tense exchange of questions and challenges. At this point the disciples of the Pharisees, together with the Herodians, try to entrap Jesus by their question about the payment of taxes.
Matthew sets up an unusual partnership between the Pharisees and the Herodians. The Herodians were supporters of Herod Antipas, a Jewish political leader who collaborated with the Romans. Such collaboration would have required a compromised observance of the Mosaic Law. The Pharisees, on the other hand, taught scrupulous observance of the Mosaic Law and opposed Roman occupation. Herodians favoured the payment of taxes; the Pharisees opposed it. The Herodians and the Pharisees approach Jesus, asking that he take sides in their dispute. If Jesus answers with the Pharisees, he shows himself to be an enemy of Rome. If he answers with the Herodians, he offends popular Jewish religious sensibilities. Jesus' response to this attempt to trap him exposes the guile of his questioners. From his first words to them, Jesus shows that he is very much aware of what they are trying to do. He asks to see a Roman coin, which is readily provided to him. It may have come from the hand of a Herodian, but the Pharisees show themselves to be quite willing to accept this compromise. Jesus has already exposed the Pharisees as hypocrites.
Jesus takes his response one step further. He asks that his questioners examine the coin. Agreeing that it is Caesar's image on the coin, Jesus tells them that it must belong to Caesar. Avoiding the question of lawfulness altogether, Jesus answers their question with simple logic. Then, going further still, Jesus tells them that their obligation is to pay to God that which belongs to God.
Jesus' response to the Herodians and Pharisees suggests the ethic that Christians ought to adopt. It reminds us of the importance of keeping things in their proper perspective. Do we attach ourselves to worldly things at the expense of the love and honour that we owe to God?

Mass Theme— Téama Aifrinn

The relationship between religious faith and public life is perplexing. In some societies, even today, there is virtually no difference between the two. In other more secular societies, any expression of religious conviction is unacceptable in public. It is true of course that there is an appropriate distinction and even separation to be made, as indeed Jesus does make today in the Gospel. But on at least two issues, there is bound to be some crossover. Religious faith informs our values and in society today policies and laws must be grounded, not in a particular faith certainly, but in values nevertheless.

Reflection-Machnamh

Following in His Footsteps

When someone does a kindness
it always seems to me
That's the way God up in heaven would like us all to be.
For when we bring some pleasure to another human heart
We have followed in His footsteps and we've had a little part
In serving Him who loves us…
for I am very sure it's true
That in serving those around us
we serve and please Him, too.

Parish Notices

We pray for all of the recently deceased especially those who have no one to remember them.

May all of their gentle souls rest in peace.

Second Collection: Mission Sunday: is taken up at all Masses across many countries to support parishes and dioceses that struggle to make ends meet. Your contribution will help parishes in places like Africa, Asia and South America. It will help pay for catechism teachers, parish schools, diocesan nursing homes, the education of student priests and religious sisters, and many other projects. Your contribution is an act of solidarity with our brothers and sisters throughout the Church.

On Saturday, October 17th : the Dioceses of Clonfert, Galway, Kilmacduagh and Kilfenora were represented by eleven delegates at the National Assembly of the Church in Ireland which took place in Gormanston, Co Meath. Please continue to pray for this ongoing process of national discernment so that it might inspire and guide our steps as a community of faith into the future.

Autumn Dues: Envelopes will be distributed over the next weeks. Contributions can be placed into the baskets at mass or left into the office or the parochial house 24, Presentation Road. Thank you all.

November Lists of the Dead: Our remembrance Novena will take place from Monday 2nd Nov until Wednesday 11th Nov inclusive.

Repair Cafes : Simply drop in with any clothing repairs and we can help mend for free. Electrical repairs need to be booked ahead repaircafegalway@gmail.com We have a craft table with a mini workshop in making Christmas decorations.

Prayer for Vocations

O Lord our God, we pray that the Lord of the Harvest may open the hearts of our young people to the possibility of a life in priesthood or religious life.
Grant this through Christ our Lord. Amen.
