Reflection: What Is Our Life For?
Much of life today is spent managing responsibilities, meeting demands, going to appointments, and trying to find a little time for ourselves. Amid all this activity, we can gradually become less available to one another, often without noticing. Today's Gospel invites us to reconsider what our lives are for. Jesus places love of God and love of neighbour at the heart of everything. Our lives are not simply our own to manage. They are gifts received from God. And the same is true of everybody else. Each person matters to God, independently of what they may mean to us. Christian faith invites us to grow in our awareness of these relationships and to become more capable of living them. We do not become fully ourselves on our own. Our journey towards maturity, and ultimately towards heaven, is a journey into deeper communion with God and with one another. That is the life for which we have been created.
