Reflection: Can We Still Think Better of It?

There are things about ourselves that other people sometimes see before we do: a way we react, a resentment we carry, a tendency to control. Someone may even try to tell us. Sometimes we listen. Sometimes we become defensive. In today's Gospel, the first son refuses his father's request but later "thinks better of it" and changes direction. The religious leaders can see that he eventually did what was right. What they find harder is to recognise that they too might need to think again. That is a difficulty all of us can have. The danger is not simply that we might be wrong, but that we become unable to see that we might be wrong. Sometimes, however, the difficulty lies with another person who will not change. We cannot make another person see. So the Gospel leaves us with two questions: What might I need to see differently? And what do I now need to entrust to God?
