During the month of November, we remember all those who have died. We remember the lessons we have learnt from them and the talents we have inherited from them. We remember how we loved them and how they loved us and made us what we are today. We remember their good deeds and determine to be more like them, and finally we pray for those who have died alone with no one to remember or pray for them.
We encourage everyone to make a special effort to come to daily Mass during the Novena for the Dead and maybe even keep up the effort for the mont h of November.

Michael Kelly, Aid to the Church in Need Ireland, writes in Intercom Magazine…

Persevering in Faith amid Persecution

This Sunday's readings, as we mark the beginning of the Week of Witness dedicated to praying for Christians persecuted for their faith, speak of trials and endurance. As we reflect on the readings, we focus on Christians persecuted for their faith, trusting in God's promise of ultimate victory.

St. Paul, in his letter to the Thessalonians, speaks directly to people who may have to pay a price for staying faithful. He says that the day of the Lord will come like a thief. The world around them talks of peace and security. Believers are not to share that drowsiness. They are children of light, meant to stay awake and sober. In any age when faith becomes costly, that sobriety is not gloom. It is simply the refusal to pretend that everything is fine, or that discipleship can be kept safely out of sight.

The parable of the talents presses the same point from another side. The servant who buries what he has been given does so out of fear. He knows the master is demanding, so he decides the safest thing is to do nothing and hand the silver back untouched. Fear of loss, fear of the master's severity, fear of standing out – any of these can send a gift underground.

For Christians who live where faith is watched, restricted, or punished, the temptation is real: keep the light low, say little, risk nothing, preserve what you can.

Neither reading promises that faithfulness will be easy or rewarded at once. What they do promise is that staying awake and putting the gift to work belong to the life of faith itself.

The persecuted Church is not asked to be reckless. It is asked not to bury what it has been given simply because the night feels long and the risk feels high.

The charity Aid to the Church in Need tells us that some 413 million Christians live in countries where religious freedom is severely violated – that's 18% or about one in five Christians. Of these, approximately 220 million live in countries where they are directly exposed to persecution – that's 10% of all Christians. Let's keep them in our prayers this weekend.
